ABOUT US

AFI's roots date back to 2005 when we started our first exports of blackeye beans to the USA. Independently owned, a lot has happened since those humble beginnings.

Since then, we have consolidated a diverse portfolio of products and grown in our production capacity, allowing us to process these products in conformance with the highest international standards.

Our business model is based on building regional partnerships with the local communities of a wide variety of products that can be obtained from our country.

This process has allowed us to grow strong & organically while at the same time have a positive impact on the people & communities that form part of our supply chain.

We have formed a dynamic and experienced team which together have put AFI in the top 5 exporters of all the products that we handle, year after year.

We currently export to more than 50 countries across all continents.

SOURCING

We go wherever we can find the best quality of the products that we deal with and directly to the communities that grow and sell their produce. Avoiding intermediary traders is a great way to generate goodwill with growers and at the same time makes our supply chain so much more cost efficient.

We currently source our products from 9 regions within Peru, Bolivia, Chile & Paraguay from where we can also offer direct exports to destination if needed by our clients.

National & Regional Presence

We operate 2 facilities in Lima and Chiclayo close to the main production centers of the products we handle.

These facilities are BRC and/or HACCP compliant with complete traceability systems in place.
